

Welcoming message

Dear compatriots,

Dear friends,

Dear visitors of the website of the Algerian Embassy in Brussels,

This week, I took up my duties as Ambassador of Algeria to the Kingdom of Belgium, the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, Permanent Representative of Algeria to the European Union, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the World Customs Organization.

As such, I welcome you to this website that we want a window on Algeria today, on the evolution of relations with Belgium and Luxembourg, including those with the institutions based in Brussels.

Beyond the honour and privilege that fall to me, I measure the weight of the responsibility in this capacity and the task that is now mine, which will be sited at the service of promoting friendship relations and bilateral cooperation.

Among all the political, economic, commercial or cultural dimensions, which structure relations between countries, the human dimension, with regard to the large Algerian community established in Belgium and Luxembourg, has a particular interest to me. Together with our Consulate General in Brussels, we will make sure that all the concerns of our nationals in these countries are better addressed.

To my compatriots, I would like to emphasize that the President of the Republic, Mr. Abdemadjid Tebboune, reminds insistently, on every occasion, that the Algerian community abroad is an integral part of the Algerian Nation and that our primary duty is to be attentive and respond to their concerns. Our duty is to serve it and protect its rights and above all its dignity, with respect for the host country. Our duty is to associate it closely with the major events of the Nation. Our duty is to encourage it to participate actively in the socio-economic development of the country and in the building of the New Algeria.

Dear compatriots,

I invite you to mobilize and take part in the realization of the great ambitions that Algeria, your country, nurture for you and for all its children without distinction, wherever they are.
